Overall title

Transactional Analysis and Group Relations in Organisations: The Relational Consultant 2010

Transactional Analysis

Transactional analysis (TA) offers theory and practice of human personality and about personality of organisations and a way of understanding human and organisational origins, dynamics and interactions. TA is based on psycho-dynamic and humanistic roots, was developed by founder dr. Eric Berne a psychiatrist by profession and further developed by many authors and practitioners.

Group Relations

Group relations (GR) offers theory of understanding unconscious dynamics in groups, organisations and large systems and offers methodology of working with those dynamics. GR is based in psycho dynamic and systemic roots, originally developed by people as dr. Wilfried Bion, A.K. Rice and dr. Eric Miller, psychoanalysts by profession and further developed by many authors and practitioners.

Both modalities have been proven highly effective for working with organisational issues and organisational clients

Elements of the training:

Theory
Skill training
Supervision
Group Process
Mini conference
Inter-vision
Project-group

Way of working

The training is set up from experience. This includes a high level of involvement in your training. Supervision cases will be used to highlight input from theory and methodological discussions. In addition, the ongoing study of the own group process will be central in understanding a psychodynamic way of working as a consultant.

Trainees are expected to take actively part in the training. Part of that is writing assessments after each seminar. The preparation towards the international certification as a transactional analyst (CTA), is introduced over time into the program, for those who wish so.

One of the seminars is set up as a "mini Group Relations Conference" and will be also open for people in other training systems.

Accreditation:

All hours of training (5x 24 + 4x8 = 152 hours) count for worldwide TA accreditation, for ASCCANZ / EAS accreditation, for associate membership in Group Relations Australia and for preparation as Organisational Certified Transactional Analyst (CTA).

Trainer:

drs. Servaas van Beekum, TSTA Sydney

Social scientist, long term international experience as trainer, supervisor, consultant and coach.

Costs and Contracts:

A$750 per seminar + GST and $250,- per supervision day

Contracting for all five seminars plus supervision days only. Down payment of $935,- at application, then two installments per year, unless other arrangements are made.

Long Term perspective:

Though this year of training is a learning unit in its own right, it is also part of a long term training system, including examination as a certified transactional analyst. The full criteria for this examination can be explored on the ITAA website (www.itaanet.org)

Application:

When you are interested in and new to this program, you will have an intake and assessment interview with the trainer (send a CV in advance please), at the end of which the mutual decision to join (or not join) can be made.

Because this is medium term planning, both for you and for the training, it is advised to have your intake interview any time in 2009.

For application please send the separate form to the address at the top.
